Pointers on getting a quality video recordings:

- Ensure there is no background noise.
- Try to find space as suitable as possible in which to record: with adequate lighting, not backlit, acoustics clear and balanced (not muffled, not echoing), etc.
- Find a distance from your device and camera angle that frames the player well.
- Most importantly, experiment a little bit with your recording set up before making your video. Do several test recordings. Play them back on high volume, preferably with headphones and listen for issues like distortion (crackling, sound breaking up). You can adjust your distance and position from the device. You also may have a device that allows you to adjust recording volume.
